⏺ Print screen is a utility, which allows to capture the screen, pan/move the window, crop the content, insert a watermark, and much more. ⏺ There are multiple methods to make the print screen. We'll guide you through it. ⏺ Print screen is an extremely useful utility, if you need to capture the screen content. From here, you can take screenshots, watermark them, crop them and share them, either via the browser, e-mail or a file. ⏺ In the main window, you have: ✓ Select the print screen method ✓ Color picker ✓ Repeat ✓ Another button and two options (normal, selected) ✓ Further buttons ⏺ If you want to select an area of the screen, you can drag the cursor over the area to select it. When the print screen method has been selected, you can start using the rest of the functions. The main window has a lot more options, but we'll cover them only briefly, so as not to distract you from using the print screen utility. After you select the area of the screen, you can set various options for the print screen, such as: ✓ Print ✓ Border ✓ Crop ✓ Watermark ✓ Scale ✓ Transparent ✓ Pixels ✓ Overlay ✓ Fit Note: The Print Screen value is not selectable, but it's good to be aware of it. It's how many pixels you want to capture, regardless of the size of the screen. You can resize the capture area in the capture options, depending on the size of the screen. You can use the Scale option to see the real-time results. When the area you want to capture is selected, the Scale option will appear on the right. If you hover over the options, there will be a list of all the screen sizes, as well as the pixels needed to capture them. If you need to crop the screen content, you can do so. Crop can be used for everything you can capture, including windows and system icons. You may need to adjust the capture area to get the desired results, but it's also better to crop it to see how much of the screen is captured. ✓ Color picker ✓ Repeat ✓ Another button and two options (normal, selected) ✓ Further

Taking screenshots with the PrintScreen button is a simple and straightforward way of recording the screen activity on your PC. It is used by a lot of users in order to send images to a friend or colleague, as well as for personal purposes, in order to monitor changes to the desktop or other system-related activities. With PrintScreen Description, the functionality is no longer restricted to its primary purpose. You can now use the software to not only take a screenshot but to also describe it, which includes highlighting all the relevant details. Easy screenshot creation with PrintScreen Description PrintScreen Description has a user-friendly interface whose primary goal is to help you create an image of the screen content. To accomplish this, you only need to click on the 'Take Screen shot' button and the software will open a new dialog. From now on, you are able to fine-tune how the screenshot will look like, as you can edit the screenshot's size, orientation, and position. On the other hand, you can specify whether you want to create a new image file or just redirect the current image to a location on your desktop. PrintScreen Description is the best choice for users with no experience in taking screenshots, as they will be guided through the process one step at a time. You can also gain access to the software's settings to allow you to save files directly to the desktop and the memory card of your computer's internal storage media. Check what your PrintScreen Description says with the print dialog As soon as you press 'Save', PrintScreen Description not only displays the newly created image in a preview panel, but it also prints it with the selected settings in your default printer. The print settings are self-explanatory and look as follows. The preview panel shows you the screenshot's dimensions, orientation, and placement options. It is worth noting that you can print the screen in black and white, greyscale, or as a dark and light image. You can also customize the color of the screenshots, from low-contrast black-and-white to a completely customized color. This way, if you are not satisfied with what the PrintScreen Description says, you can change a few things before you actually save the file. Working as a screenshot editor PrintScreen Description is not limited to creating screenshots, but also works as a screenshot editor. For instance, you can add text, clip objects from the original image

My problem is the page with the master page is requesting a different controller (master) to display the other pages. When the client renders the page the master controller action is called. What i need is to create a custom controller to handle the sitemap control. How do i do that and where should i begin? Thanks in advance. A: I do not do my site with asp.net MVC or Razor but I'll share this to put you in the right direction in the event you do. I would start with an empty mvc website and then build it using whatever technology you chose. For instance if you wanted to try razor with an empty site then the following article would be great but start with a normal site. In your controller create an action that will return a sitemap. Then in your view you render the view for that controller action. This should put the right stuff in the right place and then you can build on top of that. EDIT I am trying to recall how to build a sitemap in MVC 4 but this is from memory. If you are using razor this is an example, you would likely use a razor view in MVC rather than your normal view. >" %>
