AJC Grep is a new text search utility for Windows 2000 and XP that supports Unix style regular expressions, searches from the command line, and integrates directly into Windows Explorer. In this article we will look at how to install and use XawM in X11. We will first look at how to install an older version of XawM that only supports XFree86 version 6.8.2 and a newer version that supports XFree86 version 7.1.8. If your distribution (such as Linspire or Ubuntu) has XawM pre-installed then you already have an older version of XawM. How to Install XawM with XFree86 6.8.2? For older versions of XawM, you can download the XawM file from the XFree86 website. You can download any version that supports XFree86 version 6.8.2. How to Install XawM with XFree86 7.1.8? If your XFree86 version supports XFree86 version 7.1.8 then you can download the XawM file from the XFree86 website. Check the XFree86 version. If your XFree86 version is older than version 7.0.0 then you can download any version that supports XFree86 version 7.0.0. How to Install XawM on a Hp 15 XawM can run on HP-UX 9, HP-UX 11 and on HP-UX 11i. For older versions of HP-UX 11i you can download XawM for HP-UX 11. Binary Package Installers (packages.xfree86.org) Installing XawM on Linux After you have installed the XFree86 package that contains the desired version of XawM, you can then download the binary package that contains the X11 sources and the XawM files for the operating system that you are using. How to Install XawM from Binary Packages on Linux After you have downloaded the binary packages, install them using the command `./configure make make install make test make install` can take a while, depending on the connection speed and processing power of your computer. It is always a good idea to save the X11 source and XawM binary packages before you start compiling. After you have installed all the packages, set up an XAWM environment using the command: `./config`
