using the BSD license Contribution of alveolar macrophages to amyloid protein secretion in the aged lung. We have previously reported that aged macrophages in the lungs are the major cellular source of the pathologic amyloid protein in amyloidosis. The aim of this study was to determine if alveolar macrophages contribute to the spontaneous amyloid protein secretion in the aged rat lung. Alveolar macrophages were isolated from young (3-week-old) and aged (12-month-old) rats and were cultured in the presence of [35S]cysteine for 48 hours. The culture medium
