I use the following code to insert a value into a table: from django.db import connection from module.models import CustomUser u = CustomUser(username=user.username) connection.close() u.save() My question is - at what point are the numbers assigned to the auto-increment field of the primary key? A: At first u.save() will insert a NEW row in mysql. When you load the row it will call this.__dict__.update(row_dict) for every list member and from the documentation of update: This method updates the member for the object instance and the member of any other objects this refers to. So updating the row doesn't change the previous value. The problem is that save doesn't actually create any row but only inserts the values into the database. To solve this you could create a new row and and update a previous one if you can find a way to identify it. I don't know how to do this using Django (not that it's a hard task) EDIT Let me explain what I mean. It seems you want to use the primary key for some kind of a ID. Well, that's a normal approach. If you don't have one, and you don't want to set it manually, you can set it as the PK. ID's are always AUTO INCREMENT. The question is how Django works with that. So, assuming the id field is in MySQL the following should work: from django.db import connection from module.models import CustomUser u = CustomUser(username=user.username, id=12)

While Republicans have already publicly expressed a desire to question former acting attorney general Sally Yates, multiple Democrats on the panel, including Rep. Adam Schiff of California, the lead Democrat on the committee, specifically requested the Democratic National Committee and Hillary Clinton's campaign for testimony. The committee also wants communications between Russian-affiliated individuals and members of President Trump Donald John TrumpOmar fires back at Trump over rally remarks: 'This is my country' Pelosi: Trump hurrying to fill SCOTUS seat so he can repeal ObamaCare Trump mocks Biden appearance, mask use ahead of first debate MORE's transition team, as well as internal emails and communications between Trump and Jared Kushner, the president's son-in-law and senior adviser. Schiff made his requests after the FBI warned lawmakers in January that Russian hackers were attempting to break into the emails of its employees and Democratic National Committee computers. ADVERTISEMENT The Democratic lawmakers are seeking email and chats between the Russians and Trump campaign staff or the RNC, the Republican National Committee and the Trump transition team. In addition, they want communications between Trump or his campaign, the RNC, the Trump transition team and former Trump campaign manager Paul Manafort, the committee's GOP lead investigator. At least one Republican on the committee initially voiced support for the Democratic requests, but the Republican majority rejected them in a vote before the committee's intelligence panel unanimously backed the FBI's findings. Republicans, in turn, are also looking to question senior Trump administration officials, including Trump himself. In an interview with the Washington Post ahead of the January congressional testimony from Sally Yates, a former acting attorney general, former director of national intelligence James Clapper and others that the White House initially sought to block, Trump said he welcomed the inquiry.
