Description of the Related Art A user is conventionally allowed to add new information
to an operation setting that is associated with a communication
terminal for example,
and has been provided

with various operation methods as a setting method for the setting information. In order to allow an adjustment of a setting that is associated with an operation of the terminal, a setting notification is conventionally given or various methods such as an on-screen key setting, a tablet setting, and a printer setting for printer settings have been proposed (for example, see the following Patent Documents 1 to 4). For example, by allowing a user to operate an operation device while viewing screen display of a terminal device such as a computer, a setting change can be made easily and more easily. In Patent Document 1, a technique is described in which a key is displayed on the display screen when a user moves a mouse cursor on the display screen and a setting change is performed when the user presses a button of the display device. However, in the related-art technique described in Patent Document 1, the 648931e174

---
