It's fast and easy to use. The junk files it finds will be neatly listed with a full preview and the list can be customized by adding to the file names. It can also build a text file with the names of the junk files that are removed. The existing text file can also be used for inclusion or exclusion of other file types. This utility will scan an entire hard drive for junk files (bad sectors, shortcuts, temporary files, etc). You can specify a mask that will look for any file and any file type on your hard drive. You can then use the "Clean Junk Files" function to remove any found junk files. By default the scan uses a recursive option, so a search will be conducted for every file on the hard drive. There are options that allow you to make the program more selective. These include scanning only a particular drive, only files under a particular size, scan for only certain file types, etc. You can also build a text file with the names of any file that is found or not found to be junk.
