Bongjonggi Bongjonggi is a variety of small Korean wine grape native to Busan and Gyeongsangnam Province, South Korea. Vitis vinifera grapes had been brought to the region in 1844 from Russia, but they did not prosper and are thought to have died out; the grape now is an endangered species. It is very similar in color, size, and shape to saeju. Bongjonggi grapes also are medium-sized, with slightly bitter tastes that complement a regional style of food. Bongjonggi wines can be made by adding botrytis to the grape's must, like saeju. Bongjonggi grapes are sometimes known as "No. 18 grapes". See also Alcoholic beverages in South Korea
