The present invention pertains to a new class of methods and apparatus relating to the injection molding of elastic blanks for disposable gloves such as infant gloves, adult diaper coverstock, and other health care products. Gloves are a very important and familiar item for many people. It is no surprise that, among the gloves available, those made of latex are our most comfortable and familiar. Early in the 20th century, a paper maker developed a method for forming health care articles from cellulose acetate pulp. Using this method, he was able to produce a latex substitute made from acetate paper. This invention led to a host of others. In particular, in 1911, the French patent POUCHNIER 30385 (Principe de fabrication de linge de caoutchouc pour soins chirurgicaux) describes a method and apparatus for making a form-fitting rubber glove. In this work, paper preforms are moulded on what resembles a candy mould, and then immersed in an aqueous suspension of natural rubber latex. Rubber has been extremely valuable for most

The gameplay is solid, and everything feels slick and polished.” Alex IGN “The game is a lot more fun to play, even though the story line is rather simple.” Kamil IGN “The game is a good (but not perfect) combination of wide-open exploration and puzzle solving.” Scott IGN “It’s got a lot of flaws, but some of them are endearing.” Miyuki IGN “The diversity of the combat and the menu design make it easy to get into.” JD IGN “A game that mixes RPG and action elements in a compelling way. ## What's new:

Sizer @William Karlsson: THinking about FF11 and wondering if it's true that in FF13 you can actually lose your appearance completely, despite how it seems from what you said but also from something Sony said on the FF15 thing or whatever it's called where you have to like download a fantasy 4 cookie to transform you into a monster... if you do lose it that is. As for where this community goes though, is what I would like to know. It's always been a solid-ish community. You know from tons of existing mods themselves that, just like with an RPG, the community builds. It's where we are now. With the Doom 3 launch it really got quite involved, but the 2, 3 and 4 launch were much less so and it used to take a month or more for something to be released. What happened here was, it sort of exploded in intensity with the Discovery of Arborea, all of this new video stuff. Then I quit for a bit when the movie thing blew up out of control and never returned. And now people are talking about scaling back the community a bit. I've got nothing against a dev team who stop releasing their game and focus solely on making Tilt brush, just saying that it's happening in this one. Right now. It's in the same general way that people have just gotten way, WAY off track with modding and that new Star Trek Beyond movie. ]]> The Perilous Realm of Fantasy!
