XSEED Games announced the release of a manual for BlazBlue: Continuum Shift Extend – the third title in its BlazBlue series and first for home video platforms – on Wednesday. The 2.54-page handbook for the game will include images of the game's character portraits and information on the new shinning weapon frames and fusion attacks in a variety of games.

BlazBlue: Continuum Shift Extend will release for Xbox 360, PlayStation 3, and PC in Japanese on March 24, 2014, XSEED Games announced. In Japan, the game will cost ¥4,800 (around '100 USD) to ¥5,500 (around '125 USD).

The game introduces new modes such as a Production Mode where players can effortlessly create their own playable characters and sides, and a time-locked Matchmaker Mode. In addition to the online service, of which more information is yet to be revealed at press time, the game will be making its debut in the west for the first time with a new story content that will be released for free at some point in the future.

"I am impressed on how Blend Masters has been able to incorporate the new style for the game and remain faithful to the original story," said Kazunoko (Mecha-Kun). "I would like to express thanks to the staff and all the team members for making this happen for the BlazBlue series, and I am very excited to finally see this story come to fruition."

"Tarnished" Gameplay: I don't really recommend playing this game if you're not into rpgs. I wish this kind of game was more popular on indie scene! It's not as story-heavy as "Observer". We've got: EZ4Ever, Super Stickman Golf 2, Midnight Club: Streets of Rage 4, Fall Frenzy, Elephant Game, and many more! Many of us are acquainted with the plea of Arthur Rimbaud "Fairy-tale to make love". His imagination had grown tired of the old, vulgar and frenzied ways of men: what he said in favor of another form of love, which has now fallen somewhat into disuse, is still admissible today. One can compare the following lines of Christa Wolf: "The times have changed: the desire and need for love has changed, today there is no longer a need to be alive in order to love. It's a different love. A love which asks nothing and which is in love with itself. A love which is alive only in the flesh, even though it is in the spirit, in essence, in psychic reality, even if it is sexless. It is a love which doesn't have a goal or aim; it is a love which doesn't demand anything of the other person, or of anybody else; it is a love which doesn't ask anything of the other person, but instead trusts in the other person, is not jealous, fears nothing. It is a love whose emotion is in the future and not in the past. Love has created bff6bb2d33

What's new in Elden Ring:

Looks very interesting and I plan to add it to the Play Store. It's a shame I don't have an AD account, but it is a PC game. Hmmm, now that I think about it, maybe the Spanish release will be iPhone compatible as well since it is in the Apple AppStore, right?

@Loquant: are they just announcing a release, or are they developing different games too? I can't find any information about which games are being developed or advertised in their launch ads. That's why I'm asking if they are currently or have ever developed other games. Actually this game seems pretty awesome. I'm not really looking forward to what the XHCD creators will end up with now though The amateur video is nice, but it suffers greatly from being shot on a phone. Please do not use such poor quality recordings. I'd like to see a professional video. I want to know what this game is going to be like in its full version. Hi! Im from Mexico and im very exited because i cant find the XHCD Team at all, although the game appeared in the spanish Apple store. No disrespect to the work of the team, Im kinda worried 'cause I was hoping to see some "rough" early screenies from the game itself! And I would really appreciate to know how to make an Iphone version of this game, i would really like to see its first 10 minutos, as a launch trailer shown on ESPN, and its release day at the same video!
