From agreement to implementation. This paper outlines the OECD work on the development and evaluation of the Principles for Responsible Investment. First, the status of the Principles at their 18th review in November 2009 is discussed. Second, to provide some historical background and context, the stages of the Principles development process and the economics of the Principles are reviewed. In the final section, the status of the evaluation of the Principles to date is reviewed and progress to date is considered in light of the OECD initial projections made at the time of their development. Finally, the OECD's Vision for the future of the Principles, with specific reference to the issues of positive governance, stakeholder engagement, and the future of the Principles is proposed.High-tech surveillance cameras and kangaroo courts have been imposed on the people of Hong Kong amid a public outcry over the extradition Bill. (Getty Images) Hong Kong has thrown the world into chaos in a public outcry over the extradition bill that has become a canker in a fight over China's encroachment on the territory's autonomy. More than two million people took to the streets in the most massive protest in Hong Kong in decades. They demanded the government withdraw the extradition bill, which would give Beijing the power to send people to mainland China to face trial in a kangaroo court. Britain and the United States have warned that the extradition bill risks undermining the special rights granted to Hong Kong by Beijing - which in turn is blocking its request for full independence or even meaningful 0cc13bf012

At the time of this writing, GAW Miners (GAM), an American-based blockchain service provider has suspended all services in the United States. Previously, the company had announced that it will shut down all servers that are in operation within the United States. This comes after the U.S. Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN) issued an advisory in a letter which indicated that it was monitoring Bitfinex, a company connected to GAW Miners, concerning its services and its affiliates. This creates a dilemma for the customers of the GAW Miners-Bitfinex platform. They have been urging the GAW Miners, via Twitter, to make a strong statement on what is actually happening. What is going on? More importantly, what should they do? Is there a final decision as to when the service is going to stop operating? While there is no specific mention of any company being shut down, all of the information suggest that GAW Miners is being shut down. This means that the official Twitter account of the company is no longer active. The page that had the information related to the suspension of services is no longer operational. Although it is, at this moment, GAW Miners will not be delivering any services. The website for GAW Miners does not have any information indicating that the services provided were to be suspended. There was a simple message which stated that the company was having a hard time. Not more than an hour ago, the website for the GAW

Miners has a message which says: "Unfortunately, it has been brought to our attention that we are no longer a legitimate company in the United States. All services on this site will be discontinued on Aug 10, 2019. We apologize for this inconvenience and the frustration this has caused you. We have taken the proper steps to fix the problem. It is not a problem with any individuals or our country. We are sorry that this has occurred." There is also a link that takes to a page where customers can
