Overview Metallophobia is a top-down action roguelike shooter set in a dystopian future. You play as a robot, attempting to complete missions and eventually rebel against the evil robots that have taken over the world. Each playthrough is a new procedurally generated map, with unique designs and challenges. Update your robot as you progress, and create a unique build - the combination of your weapons and modules. There are currently three playable classes. Each robot has unique abilities and weaknesses, making the strategy of getting out of danger to upgrade and create your best combination to survive the mission. Weapon Upgrades Each weapon has a number of upgrades that allow you to customize your loadout. Wipe your enemies down with a barrage of firepower and shoot down incoming enemies with the powerful Minigun. Module Upgrades Another available upgrade is to the robot's modules. These small, robotic components let you extend your abilities to increase your survivability and defeat enemies, make you a boss in your own right, or a deadly trap. Gun Power The default class is the Assault class. The increased range and weight of the MAVGASP is helpful to keep your enemies at bay. The MAVGASP has high reload speed, and very low fire rate. You should avoid the MAVGASP when firing, and always run from it. It can also be used in cover to make a good stopping spot. Your fast pistol is useful to run and gun from cover, but is not as effective against enemies up close. The FANG is deadly when placed on fire, but it is slow and has a lower rate of fire than the other weapons. The MAVGASP has higher damage output, but is hard to aim accurately. You should use it carefully and try to find a spot that will allow you to wipe out enemies quickly and get out of danger. Seen on the right, and hidden in the lower left corner of the picture. Grenades have high damage, but they do minimal damage and cannot be re-fired. They are best used to open up cover for you to escape or to take out an enemy sneaking close on you. Overall, the default gun is useful against most enemies, but the MAVGASP is essential to beat bosses and survive close to other enemies. Metallophobia begins with a rather simple tutorial. The objective is for you to move from the c9d1549cdd

So I was disappointed to find that there is no story or back-story to this game, it only has a choose your own adventure style story. However, there are many scenes that you can choose to either skip or not. This is such a bittersweet experience when dealing with these results. On the one hand you get to skip a lot of tough scenes that would make it much easier on the other hand, you're missing out on some great things. Crafting: Crafting items is the greatest joy that this game has to offer. The sheer simplicity of crafting makes you feel like a powerful wizard. There are so many ways to approach it. You can always just give the goddess all the stuff you want to craft, but that will also cause a chain reaction that is incredibly hard to control and will have unintended consequences. Also the marketplace is quite good at making supplies for you. It's really rewarding to scavenge and craft, and then craft again with even more resources! Dying: There is no real way to die in this game. You will be brought back to the game, and even if you die, your database will restart. So if you're starting from a checkpoint, it will be like the game is brand new. So dying is very discouraged, and you will almost never die. However, there are boss fights which don't have a specific way to defeat them, such as if you fail to perform a task before completing the tutorial. It is possible for the game to lock up on you and you may have to restart from the beginning. If you happen to get stuck like this, just keep playing and find a way to beat the boss with whatever you have available. You may also get stuck on a stage with a particular item that you can't craft, but you may still be able to find a way around this, or craft the item yourself. But at that point, you may want to try again and take on the dungeon with all the items you've been offered. There's a save-reload option which can be used at any time, and there is a hard-reset option when the game freezes. Game Controls: Controls are simple and responsive. Pressing the spacebar makes your character move forward, the left and right arrows make him/her go in those directions. Buttons are a bit clunky in the beginning, but it gets more responsive with the time you play it. The game is very easy to learn, but the controls are a bit

What's new:

Gun Paintball Guns are portable air guns that shoot paintballs. These paintballs are a spherical gelatinous substance that is made with nontoxic colors of red, orange, yellow, green, blue, purple, and pink, together with an adhesive. Paintball guns have a trigger that sits on the top end of the handle. To fire a paintball, an operator points the gun at the target and shoots, releasing the paintball from the gun. The paintball then collides with the target and continues on until it bounces off or the paintball runs out of air. Paintball air guns use compressed air to shoot paintballs, and because they shoot a circular object, they do not need to have a reservoir containing air. They can be used to replace individual airsoft airguns or simulate actual firearms. A paintball shot from an airgun is a two-part projectile: the paintball itself and a plastic composite container inside the paintball. Both break apart once they leave the barrel. Determining the passage of time for the projectile to break up, or how far it can travel, requires high-speed photography. They are not to be confused with paintball markers, which use a higher-powered supply of compressed gas to shoot and propel a three-foot-long liquid-filled capsule at a speed of 180 mph. The terms "paintball gun" and "paintball marker" are often confused, though both are legal to operate. Regulations vary by jurisdiction. In order to shoot it effectively, paintball guns, as with virtually any air-powered weapon, must be inspected to ensure they are in good working order, the air supply is clean and free of contaminants, and the trigger is free of any damage or discoloration. The minimum weight for a paintball gun ranges between, depending on local regulations and the type of paintball. However, an average-sized adult can fire five to ten thousand paintballs per fill in less than an hour. The magazine size or "capacity" of an airgun is measured in "paintballs", and paintballs are typically sold in various sizes, ranging from 9.5 mm - 12.8 mm, 14.7 mm - 18.5 mm or 27 mm - 36 mm and some as large as 50 mm. Usage Paintball is a team sport played mostly indoors with two or more teams
