History The Logo of the Department of Public Safety was designed by Thomas G. Goetz, a long time member of the American Institute of Graphic Arts. He developed the design for the logo in 1945. The logo of the Department of Public Safety, with the beaver replacing the buffalo, was first placed on state vehicle license plates in 1950. The emblem is used by the Department of Public Safety in many different forms. It can be found on the departmental vehicles and many state buildings. The DS Patrol which serves as an agency of the department also utilizes the logo in different forms on patrol vehicles, command vehicles, and officer cadet helmets. The DS DMV uses the logo in their building. The DSC is also using the logo on the majority of their vehicles. The DSP uses the logo on their hats. The logo is also used to identify the camo pattern worn by the Iowa State Cyclones baseball team. Legal The use of the logo on these various vehicles and state buildings is legal and the department cannot prohibit the use of the logos.
