Pectin methylesterase inhibitors, such as 5-n-butyl-deoxynojirimycin (NB-DNJ), arrest the cell cycle of human lymphocytes at the pre-G1 phase and induce chromosome aberrations in the pre-G1 phase. We have demonstrated that the intracellular concentrations of protein and polysaccharides in NB-DNJ-treated lymphocytes decrease significantly as the reaction time passes. In this study, the effects of NB-DNJ on the reparation of chromosome damage were examined. Purified protein and polysaccharides were added to cultures of NB-DNJ-treated human lymphocytes during the repair period. It was found that the addition of purified protein and polysac
