I like it when my mom plays video games. I think it's a good way to bond and relate to each other. It's also a way to relax us when we're trapped indoors at home because of the hurricanes. I also think it's a good way for mommy to pass time when daddy is playing Call of Duty. But when it comes to video games, it's usually N64 or stuff like that. And it really started when I was about 3 or 4 year old. My parents were always playing Nintendo. Now they've gotten into PC games, Xbox, PS, etc. If they do get a Nintendo console in the future, I'm pretty sure my parents are going to get some NES games and we're going to play them together again. I want to admit, mom is even better than dad. When I was in the womb, the best thing I had in my life was mom. I can remember the first time I saw her. She was sitting on top of a metal table with a bunch of other moms. There was a man sitting on a stool with a machine just behind her. He was asking them questions while writing everything down. My mom's hair was curled, so she looked kinda sexy. Then she smelled good too. I was a lil' 4 months old at the time. She couldn't even stand up. My mom held my hand as we walked over to the machine. The results told us my "pregnancy levels" according to the monitor. My mom looked at it for a little while, then looked at me. She just kind of nodded her head and said "Well...it's not good". I honestly don't remember everything that happened. But from the things that I've learned over the years, mom stayed the night at the hospital and then came home the next day. My mom hasn't been able to play video games since back then. I've only seen her play like 3 times in the past 10 years. She hasn't touched the N64 or DS either. But it's like when I'm playing with dad, when I get the game, I just want to play it with mom and I'm not interested in the console itself. So I was looking for a game that I could play with my mom. I wanted to play it co-op with her, so the game had to have online. I was looking and looking. I think I've looked everywhere. I finally found something! I found a girl named Selena
