A simplified estimation method for instrumental error of angle-intensive signal processing. Given that most incident signals that we observe are affected by continuous signals that appear to be sinusoidal, an oblique-incidence recorder (OIC) is employed as one example in angle-intensive signal-processing method. For the sinusoidal incident signals, the characteristics of the OIC have often been exploited in angle-intensive

The original gameplay of the "Solar Explorer" series was built in 2007 and has been in an alpha state for years now, with lots of new features added, new difficulty modes and new modes all around. It has been a work in progress for years and is at the very core of what I believe to be "Solar Explorer: New Dawn". Real environmental physics The world presented in "Solar Explorer: New Dawn" isn't a set of cut-out boxes. The world is real, filled with environmental conditions that each affect the lander, its overall performance and the visibility. Some places, like the Sun, affect all of your lander settings at once, and it's how you handle the different challenges that will tell the story of your adventure. Gravity The gravity of the lander directly affects your lander's performance and how high you can fly in a mission. It can be directly controlled, but the direction is randomized. You'll have to get to the bottom of this effect and to make it successful, you'll have to face the challenge of keeping a stable orbit around the planet. Wind Wind affects the amount of fuel you'll use to keep your lander going, which directly affects the mission deadline. In the future you could be flying through an atmosphere that generates its own wind. Currently, the wind is only generated by the atmosphere in this game, but it still adds an important element of challenge to a landing. Fires When a mission is too difficult, help your team survive by burning away fuel and prolonging your stay in orbit. A fire can be generated and it can spread quickly. If you want to have the shortest possible mission, you'll have to keep a close watch on the fires. They can even be quite dangerous, as they can generate strong winds that may even knock you over. Animate flight path The path the lander follows is animated and can be actively controlled by direct input of the player. Use the Landcaster Many of the landers in the game are in the form of the original Flying Bull lander. There are 3 different versions of it, but the differences between them are very important to understand the difference in gameplay. You'll have to choose your lander wisely in order to learn the most about its abilities. Alien landers Some of the landers you'll encounter in the game are very alien to our reality and require a high level of skill to master. A few of them look like they couldn't have come out

The Greatest WWE Ride[Subscribe] Comment: 0 TweetQ: .htaccess subdomains URL Redirect, but not.htaccess style virtual domains? I would like to be able to re-direct from: www.domain.com/index.php?url=mysite.com to: www.domain.com/mysite.com So i can make the web app on the various subdomains. I have followed this and have this so far: RewriteEngine On RewriteCond %{HTTP_HOST} ^(www.)?domain.com$ RewriteCond %{REQUEST_FILENAME}!-f RewriteCond %{REQUEST_FILENAME}!-d RewriteCond %{REQUEST_URI} ^(.)$ RewriteRule ^.$ [QSA,R] This works, but my test page, thus needs editing the.htaccess file. I have added this: RewriteCond %{HTTP_HOST} ^(www.)?domain.com$ RewriteCond %{REQUEST_FILENAME}!-f RewriteCond %{REQUEST_FILENAME}!-d RewriteCond %{HTTP_HOST} ^(.).domain.com$ RewriteRule ^(.)$ [R=301,L] This should work, but instead it switches the main domain, but does not redirect, so instead the URL comes up as a HTTP ERR 404 page, so I cannot use my app on domain.com/mysite.com. The.htaccess file would have a 301 Redirect in place, but the root domain is now so it does not work, is there any way around this? A: You're making the same mistake that caused your first attempt to fail. You missed out a condition. The URL and URL-path parameters stay the same so you don't need to redirect
