nimo clock is a small and lightweight clock that can easily replace the default clock, next to the taskbar. The clock can be used to view the current time and date. You can calculate mathematical expressions using the calculator interface and locate a certain date using a calendar. The interface of the clock can be easily customized by changing the font, colors and transparency. The main window of the clock can be displayed on the whole desktop. From the taskbar, you can hide the clock, set the delay and force quit the application. The clock is designed to be a lightweight application with a small executable size. The clock can be used on any windows platform; XP, Vista, 2003, 2008, 7 and later versions. The clock is based on the GEOFF module from GeoFF. The "nimo clock" is based on version 0.08 of GeoFF. Versions 0.08 to 2.04 of GeoFF are included in this package. Thank you for using my software. RealClockWakeUP is a smart wake-up clock, which automatically shows the current time and date of your computer desktop. It allows you to set the calendar, week view, day view and such to see exactly what day it is and know what time it is. With RealClockWakeUP, you can also set your computer to automatically shut down at a specific time, so no matter what you are doing on your computer, you can shutdown in a precise time whenever you feel like. RealClockWakeUP is really easy to use, and provides you with more advanced features than the default, Windows standard clock in your system tray. It will add just 1KB to your PC's memory usage. Features: - Show the desktop timer in the system tray. - Show the calendar, week view, day view and time option. - Turn off the screen lock (and therefore turn off the password protection of the computer) at a certain time. - Turn on the computer at a certain time. - Change the date and month to show exactly what day and month it is. - Make the clock with rounded edges instead of sharp edges. There are objects made entirely of paper and objects made entirely of plastic. But is there a word for "object (like these) made of two substances (like plastic and paper) that on the surface seem the same, but on the inside are different?" The best words that come to my mind are "susceptive" and "dubious", but it doesn't feel quite right. EDIT: I found out there's no widely used English word for this (with exception of the pretty recent "hybrid object"), so I'm looking for synonyms. A: The term "metamaterial" has been used for such objects. It refers to an object with a composite structure, where the constituents are engineered so that they have similar properties under different circumstances. Examples: meta
