Now I have installed MATLAB 2014b and again, I tried to install from add-on and there is some error as shown in the attached image. What could be the issue? A: The problem might be that your computer has already installed/bound MATLAB to a directory, which you cannot change, as you have stated in your comment. So, first you need to check if you can change the directory where MATLAB is installed: Open a DOS window or Command Prompt From the command line, enter: cd (your MATLAB directory) If the command cd (your MATLAB directory) returns a directory or a path, then you can't change the MATLAB directory. If the command cd (your MATLAB directory) returns a file name, then you can change the MATLAB directory by changing the current directory to that file. For example: cd c:\matlab\R2014a\bin\win64 If you get the error cd:
