—We don't agree with the prophets of the Crescent City Pileups and Laundromat Cull. We believe our forces are entirely competent to stand in the breach. In this age, the ax falls not at the side of the Mother's bosom, but at the feet of the beloved. # PART I THE INEVITABLE CROSSING # 1 SIGNS ARE NOT created so much as discovered, by the faithful. The grinding of paws, the squeal of metal, the long fur of mirthlessness. The scholar is fettered to the desk, wall, book. The faithful studies another kind of structure—small chambers by the window, by the piss bucket, by the corner of the alley. This is how signs are made. The Mosque of the Thief. The Theater of Babepoint. The Bun in the Besaid Oven. The Twentieth Hole of Green Wine and then Stinking Water. The City of the Possessed. The Doors That Are Both Doors, Light Upon Light. The Lone Night Stalker of Buttonville. The Cornish Ponykin. The Simple Tree. The Martian Cafe. The Chasers in the Hum. The Vindication of the Ladies Steeped in the Honeyed Tongue of the Whores of the Moonstruck Pounds. The Pee in the Bits. The Moonlight in the Watermelon. The Face of the Beauty Busker. The Coffin of Frothe, Coked Up and Purged of the Viscid Churn of the H. A (White) Negress in the Yellow Carriage. The Ketchup and They. The Dark Drink of the River Mouth Spill, and every bitter suds ever spilled upon this earth. The signs are everywhere, signposting the messes of men, drunk on their own lies, rolling into their own muddied depths. The signs are everywhere, begging you to turn your back on them and bend your head in shame. And in their wake, the people: they stumble, they fall, they kneel. But they rise and they stumble and they become the people of the taqiya. # 2 WITHIN THE CITY there are no boundaries for the ax falls, no limits. No stand between the faithful and the wicked. The city is wide and deep. It extends away from the eastern gates with a grim arc, until it reaches the Widowmaker Road and the snow where
