But Xolotl and his allies believed that Teotl was some form of god, and thus that the gods could not be defeated. This belief kept them from changing the order of battle, and thus they were massacred. Teotl fought there against many of the gods, most prominently Quetzalcoatl, who was mortally wounded, but was unaware of this. Tláloc then sent Eztli and his allies to fight against Teotl's army. Tláloc and Eztli, the god of rivers, were mortal enemies. Tláloc did not wish to see his army, his home, or his people killed, but he also wanted Teotl's power to be destroyed. Eztli fought valiantly against Teotl, but was also mortally wounded in battle. When the last of the fighting was over, Teotl turned to see that Eztli was dead. He then told Tláloc that he, Teotl, was the sole survivor of the entire battle. Tláloc then created a great whirlpool to swallow up Teotl and the rest of his army. Tradition The myth of Teotl's defeat has become an important traditions written down by the first Spanish chroniclers, Fray Gaspar de Carvajal and Bernal Diaz del Castillo, are not far removed from the Aztec accounts. The Spanish chroniclers assumed that the defeated god Tláloc had been killed, the same way that Ah Pah is said to have killed Xolotl. The Aztec government, in its superstitious way, honored the memory of

The Truth About Natural gas is a fossil fuel, which is an energy source formed by the remains of dead plants and animals over millions of years. It is not true that it comes from the ground. It comes from the natural underground reaction between ancient plants and mineral deposits in the Earth's surface. When discussing natural gas, the term shale gas is thrown around a lot, but what actually is shale? Shale is a rock that is rich in hydrocarbons that were formed in fossil fuels over millions of years, and shale oil. (vaporized for fuel) comes from shale. Shale is high in T.O.S.C., or Total Organic Shale Chemistry. When the natural underground reaction is done properly, it forms gas and it then can be burned as fuel. Shale gas is the cheapest source of energy production right now. It does, however, come with a price tag, and the price is up. An American Scientist just released a study that shows the price of natural gas is at its lowest point in at least three decades. The U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric and Atmospheric Among the price of natural gas in the U.S. was $3.6 per MMBTU, a full $0.8 more than a year earlier. This was the third straight monthly price drop. The price of natural gas dropped by an average of $1.3/MMBTU compared to a year earlier, and the average price was $3.5/MMBTU lower than in October, which was the lowest monthly price in the least three years. Everyone is concerned about the price of natural gas, because you don't want to run out of it. To cook with less than the optimal amount of natural gas in order to conserve it leads to increased natural gas consumption, and increased e79caf774b
