* Layer name: _ When creating your picture, it's good practice to make your first layer as a name that describes its purpose. This is a great way to remember to take out all the "overlays" or editing that you're going to do, so that the picture is all clean and unmodified. The order for layer creation is: * 1.The background color or original photograph * 2.The layer you want to edit—a layer that has been named for a specific purpose It's best to make a new layer for each step of your editing, in case you need to completely undo a previous change. * 3.The layer that you're going to make a new layer from * 4.Another layer that you'll make a new layer from * 5.And so on and so forth until you're done editing. (If you're unsure, you can always add a duplicate layer first to take out edits until you're ready to start in.) You can always use the _Select All_ (Control-A), _Deselect All_ (Control-D), or _Quick Select_ (Control-Shift-A) commands to select multiple areas of your picture to modify. * * * NOTE _The best way to use the Smart Brush is to have layer visibility turned on. When you are using the Smart Brush, it should only modify the parts of the photo in the layer that you want it to work with. And when you do a Smart Brush filter, you should erase all the portions of the image outside of the layer, so the Smart Brush filter only affects the areas of the image that are on the current layer._ You can use a layer mask to control the visibility of each layer. ## Chapter 3: Vector & Paint Masks In this chapter you will learn about the core of Photoshop: vector and paint masks. Almost 50 years later, we’re starting to see a re-up of this plan, in the form of a grassroots “Cuban Twitter Revolution.” Cuban Twitter is a social platform designed to bring Cubans, many of whom spend most of their time in the age-old internet shadows of their neighbors, a direct connection to the rest of the world. Here is an interview with WUSA.com about the importance of this initiative: – 1. Can you explain in plain English the concept of Cuban Twitter? - Yes. Cuban Twitter is a social platform designed to bring Cubans, many of whom spend most of their time in the age-old internet shadows of their neighbors, a direct connection to the rest of the world. 2. How has the Cuban Twitter project been received in the U.S.? - We have been lucky with the reception. In a lot of ways, U.S. firms have helped us promote Cuba itself. Over the last few years, we have received tweets from chefs, music promoters, fashion designers, foreign tourists, celebrities, real estate agents and fashion designers have all promoted us on Twitter. 3. How does Cuban Twitter function? Is it an umbrella Facebook-like application, or is it a spinoff? - Yes, it is an app and we are releasing it in 7 platforms right now, like iOS, Android, Windows Phone, Blackberry, and others. Our intention is that our users are able to share videos, photos and links easily using just their smart phone and Twitter. 4. Have any third-party applications been integrated into Cuban Twitter? - Yes. Over the last few months we have been working with some great developers, like those from the Mobile App Store and the Android Market. 5. Who has been leading the Cuban Twitter project in Cuba, and who is leading it in the U.S.? - Cuba Twitter is a project of the Cuban Institute of Cinematographic Art and Technique (ICIC), which is a government-run entity, and we have a Cuban developer, Ana Paula Madrid Ruiz, based in New Jersey who is leading the project in the U.S. 6. Q: Keep the original non-conformists and the conformists together If we select the non-conformists from the conformists and the conformists from the non-conformists, then we are left with a mixture of conformists and non-conformists. Conformists will conform to the rule-of-thumb, as they believe that is best. Non-conformists will break the rule-of-thumb for their own means, as they know that is the best. So if we leave them together, then the best solution would be where they function together. But can we design the environment so that this is the situation? A: The solution is Conformist + Nonconformist = Genius. This is true because if you want to create a genius you do not mix the two in one flask. A: The question comes across as similar to a birth-death process in which there are n_c conformists and n_n nonconformists. The population evolves through generations according to the following dynamics: Select a population at random and copy it to the next generation; select the n_m worst conformists with probability $\frac{c}{n}$, and the n_m best nonconformists with probability $\frac{c}{n}$; replicate the total n in the second generation; and so on. If the selection probability c is 1 , then we have the well-known random mutation model for the birth-death process. In this case the population will grow exponentially, and so if $n \gg c$ the total population will grow exponentially. On the other hand, if n They are the negative images that lay at the heart of the Aztecs' sharpest success and deepest failures during the late 1970s and 1980s.
