Evaluation of the immediate and delayed hypersensitivity reactions in the eye. The local immune response of the eye to different types of antigen was studied in the rat. The material consisted of both soluble and particulate antigen as well as preparations which contained T- and B-cell epitopes. The response was assessed by a drop test using two models for the eye: (1) alkali-burned eye (RB-eye) and (2) the dendritic cell-deficient (DC-eye). The following results were obtained: (a) MHC class I antigens were present on the red blood cells as well as on the iris, (b) MHC class II antigens were present on the iris but not on the red blood cells of the RB-eye, (c) following in vitro sensitisation the iris, but not the RB-eye, showed a significant migration of lymphocytes into the eye as visualised by intravital microscopy, (d) following in vivo sensitisation the iris, but not the RB-eye, exhibited an increased vascular permeability as visualised by Evans Blue dye extravasation, and (e) the eye-draining lymph nodes showed an increased cell-mediated immune response when the RB-eye was tested using MHC class I-restricted antigens in the guinea pig. These

ShapeExplorer [Win/Mac]

ShapeExplorer Crack Keygen is a small application that will allow you to view shapefiles (SHP). The shapefiles are usually used for storing the 3D coordinates that define models and shapes. You can use this tool for viewing the content of certain files before using them with other complex programs. The interface of the program is easy to use and it supports layers in order to view all the details included in the file. Content of the app is copyright, all the rest is public domain.
