Adaptive streaming in a multi-receiver network environment is a modern digital video streaming technology, which is mainly applied to IP video surveillance, digital TV, and the like. The adaptive streaming technology is also called HTTP adaptive streaming. With HTTP adaptive streaming, not only a fixed video can be played on different networks, but also a certain parameter can be adjusted according to current network quality. If the bandwidth fluctuates during streaming, HTTP adaptive streaming adjusts the bit rate, which makes the video beautiful and smooth. FIG. 1A shows a transmission process of a video stream in the prior art, and FIG. 1B shows a case of low bandwidth. In this transmission process, the transmitted bit rate is configured to 120 kbit/s. Client 110, after receiving the adaptive transmission bit rate (the actual bandwidth is 20 kbit/s), adjusts the bandwidth to 15 kbit/s according to data, and then becomes the actual bandwidth of the received bit rate. Client 110 plays the video stream through the bandwidth of 15 kbit/s. In the case of low bandwidth, the duration of transmission is very short, and the total bandwidth of the video stream is also very small. As shown in FIG. 1B, in this time, the bandwidth is low, and there is also a lot of gaps in the received bit rate, which causes the video stream to be out of sync or even unable to play. A bandwidth of a video stream for a certain period of time mainly depends on the bandwidth of the terminal and the selected transmission mode (e.g., 1:1, 3:1, or 1:3), a specific interval between two consecutive packets, and the recording parameter of the video. ## What's new in Outbreak - Rainbow Player Skin:

Chapter 25: Guardians From the edge of the forest, ten soldiers from Thane's platoon peeped above the brush. The sand was hard and the patch of sun was moving swiftly towards the horizon. As if that was all it took, Justen drove a group of goblins headlong into the area. Seven ran off, and the others smacked down to the ground. Stepping onto one that was already beat up, he stared at the goblin. "How did you get in our camp here? I thought the forest was cleared for the measure." "Not by me. I'm Golis," the goblin wheezed. "So how did you find this spot if the search parties haven't had this area yet?" "We earned our meal," the goblin said hopefully. Somehow a number of goblins found their way to the forest and infiltrated the position. Not knowing how many more were after him, Thane tried to figure out the best way to get the goblins out of the camp. He stood up and shouted to the men from his platoon. "The forest is more than three hundred feet from the edge of the clearing. I'm sending a squad back this way. They'll mop up any that are left." "What are you doing?" the sergeant of the second squad asked. "We're not getting these type of snoops out of here by standing guard. We're going to pull them out of the area." "How about the fire hazard?" another asked. "I know this, I've got a plan. Face front, faces, three paces," Thane said. Litting the goblin with the gas bomb, he was amazed on how big the thing was. Thane didn't know how it worked so he didn't know if it would work at all, but he decided to risk it. He lit it. A brilliant green flame streaked towards him. He dropped and rolled to avoid the fire but the other soldiers of his group were too slow and the goblins had more important places to go that hadn't figured that part out yet. As the smoke cleared, Thane stood up looking for the others. The lookout crew was sitting in the middle with the open port on the smokestack. The vent pipe was broken away and the mask had a fully opened panel with the inside filled with quicksand. There were five others who were trying to

Las Vegas families love play time with their pets. Lisa and Kerwin Espinoza are fostering rescued pet dogs while they wait on a service dog puppy they received from PetSmart to arrive. They keep pet dogs and cats in their home at Campo and Chihuahua Drive in Henderson. This is their first experience fostering a pet, and could it be of interest to others? "Because of the temperament of her rescues for me, it is a possibility," said Lisa. "I don't always keep them together with the average pet, but will if she is better off, as they can get confused." They currently are fostering the two pups together for the first six to eight weeks, as they grow they will be monitored as to which pup stays home. Espinoza, 40, explained that they currently only have the space for around six, and have only received two since they moved in with Kerwin's ex-wife, 26-year-old Megan, who has two dogs already. Lisa, whose education and work involves her studying and planning for adoption, was aware of the need for dogs and cats for foster care and said there isn't a waiting list for them. "We get people and their pets seeking help, which is a great thing to hear, and we take in a handful every time, it varies," she said. Caring for pets that have been abused or neglected is rewarding, both Kerwin and Lisa said. "When they come to us all we can think of is, what did I do to deserve a good thing? Even when they are still, but really in need of help," Kerwin said. "We can
