YouTube video tutorials are often available for Photoshop. Photo editing software that runs on a web browser There are a number of software programs that run on web browsers, and many of them have advanced capabilities. A photo editing program that operates on a browser (rather than within a web browser) is called a web or cloud-based program. These programs can look like traditional desktop programs but they are actually part of a web service. Cloud-based programs are good for many reasons. The user doesn't have to install the program and the program is stored in the cloud instead of on the user's computer. Images are handled by a server (often hosted by the company that runs the program) instead of being stored on the user's computer. You don't even have to log in to use a cloud-based program. For example, you can sign in to your favorite photo album software (not discussed in this book) or import your photo collection on iCloud.com (which is discussed in the next section) and start editing without having to worry about downloading or installing software. A few caveats for cloud-based editing programs include: Cloud-based programs tend to be more expensive than most other software products. Some web-based programs can't handle very large files, or provide options for layers, clone stamping, paths, or masks, or even other advanced editing techniques. A number of web-based programs don't support document-specific changes to the color settings. Users have to be online to edit their images. Upload your photos to the cloud Some software programs are designed to upload your photos to a shared server, either for backup or as a gallery. With iCloud, you can upload your photos to a cloud-based computer service instead of your own computer. You can edit and work on a photo without downloading it to your personal computer. When you send a photo to the cloud, the software automatically saves a copy of the photo on your computer. The major photo programs offer their own cloud-based photo service. For example, in the Bridge software you can choose Edit⇒Import Images⇒Cloud-Based Service, click Import, and choose either Dropbox or iCloud to upload your photos, and then select the name of your sharing account. You can then click Import Images and the photos will automatically upload to the cloud for viewing and editing. Using the standard Bridge service, you can view your photos in the main window and also use any

Q: Problem with JSON data passing from one activity to the other I'm passing a JSON object from one activity to the other. But when I debug it in the first activity I see that the data in the JSON objects array has been passed but there are no data in the array. However when I debug in the second activity, that is again not null, I can see it in the JSON object which was passed. What am I doing wrong? Please let me know. Here are the codes: First activity: public void onResume() { super.onResume(); JSONObject jsonObj = new JSONObject(); try { jsonObj.put("1", "978390559116"); jsonObj.put("2", "978390559117"); jsonObj.put("3", "978390559118"); jsonObj.put("4", "978390559119"); jsonObj.put("5", "978390559120"); jsonObj.put("6", "978390559121"); } catch (JSONException e) { e.printStackTrace(); } Intent intent = new Intent(getApplicationContext(), Search_activity.class); intent.putExtra("dataArray", jsonObj.toString()); startActivity(intent); } Second activity: @Override public void onCreate(Bundle savedInstanceState) { super.onCreate(savedInstanceState); setContentView(R.layout.search_layout); System.out.println("this is the data" + getIntent().getExtras().getString("dataArray")); try{

What's New In Photoshop Paint Splatter Brushes Free Download?

A massive blaze tore through the office of an independent publishing house and bookstore in the wake of President Trump's controversial decision to pull out of the Paris climate accord. The Wilton arson attack is being investigated as a possible act of domestic terrorism, officials said. "This was a deliberate act to try to close down the business. … We believe it was connected to the Trump decision," Syracuse Police Chief Frank Fowler said in a press conference on Wednesday. The business is known as WILTON, an indie imprint that published the first-ever story in the Harry Potter books and an acclaimed biography of author John Updike. "There are a lot of people working in the book world that have become increasingly disheartened with what appears to be the increasingly destructive nature of the Trump presidency," Ryan Cleary, a co-founder and owner of WILTON, told The Daily Beast. "We are the black swans," Cleary said. "We are the ones who are going to outlive the Duggars [on the reality TV show]. We are going to be the ones who are still around to be shown the door." WILTON is a "social justice" imprint that is known for its editorial vision, many described as "progressive, independent, leftist" and Trump-resistant. "It's not a haven for the right," Cleary said. "It's not a representation of how we feel about the Trump administration." The business publishes fiction, poetry, nonfiction, and popular biography. Their first author, Raymond Carver, wrote "Will You Please Be Quiet, Please?" Cleary said that while he believes the arson attack on Wilton is related to the Paris climate accord, he can't say for sure. "Not only do I believe it was related to the Paris accord, I believe it was related to the political climate," Cleary said. "I don't think they have a clue what they are doing and, therefore, they may cause multiple fires in the future." Authorities are calling on the public for tips on the arson attack. The fire started Monday evening and was contained by 4 a.m. Wednesday. But the five-story structure that housed the boutique and other
