 Converts to ZIP, CAB, LHA and BH archives (Pure CABs have no compression) Supports WinZip (TM) and WinRAR 2.6/7.x archives. Generates portable binary archives (CAB, LHA and BH). Allows to generate portable TAR, TGZ and TBZ archives. Also, it allows to preserve the structure of ZIP archives, so that an old archived file (compatible with WinZip/WinRAR 2.6/7) may be extracted by a new compression method. Allows to convert a ZIP file to a ZIP, RAR or ACE archive. Strong AES encryption. Automatic detection of the archive contents, to support extraction of binary files. Supports large ZIP files (> 4GB) and archives with over 150 different types of embedded streams in ZIP archives (RAR, ZIP, UUE and ACE archives). Many options allow you to control the compression methods, and the encryption methods. Manually and automatically determine the file type, and the archive type. ⬜ A set of command line tools (called "IZArchiveCommands") that can be called from batch (.bat) files, embedded in scripting languages or executed from other applications. ⬜ But a single command is often enough. ⬜ Frequently used commands from this add-on are called by IZArchiveCommands menu or batch file. ⬜ Single command may be used instead of having several add-ons. ⬜ The "IZArc" command is designed as easy-to-use interface to all other IZArchiveCommands commands (plus some other useful commands). There are basically three modes of IZArc usage: "std" (command line), "batch" and "embed" (for scripting languages). ⬜ "std" (command line) is the standard way and should be the primary way to use IZArchiveCommands. ⬜ "batch" is for batch files. ⬜ "embed" is for scripting languages and other applications. ⬜ "std" and "batch" can produce same output. ⬜ "embed" is more powerful, but you need to change set of commands which you want to use to call specific commands. ⬜ Use IZArc as usual way, if you can use script. If you cannot use script, you can embed all of IZArcCommands in your own script. This add-on is intended for the use in IZArc scripting languages (ZScript, JScript, VBScript, etc) or scripting languages (powershell, javascript, vbs, perl, python, etc). These scripts are exactly like the batch scripts to execute these commands. Besides, IZArc requires cscript to run some commands. You can create shortcut icons for IZArcCommands commands in IZArc.exe. You can edit shortcut icons and produce new icons (make zip, 7z, 8z commands). IZArc is highly compatible with WinZip. You can also use IZArc command line if you already have a WinZip application installed. Do not worry about how to install WinZip and IZArc. You will use IZArc without WinZip application as usual way. The following usage examples are for batch file (.bat). Remember you should have access to the command prompt. ⬜ Start the IZ
