Hannover is situated in the west-central part of Lower Saxony's five state districts, which are Nordwestmecklenburg, Hannover, Braunschweig, Göttingen, and Wolfenbüttel. Hannover's population (including the surrounding metropolitan area, named Hannover-Mitte) is approximately 1.2 million (2017) and the city proper extends over an area of 30.8 km<sup>2</sup>. Geography Hannover lies on the Deister, a peninsula of the North German Plain which is hilly in the southwest. To the east of the peninsula are the Lower Saxony mountains, mainly the Harz and Elbe Uplands. To the northeast, Hannover borders the natural region of the Weser Uplands, and to the northwest, the subdivision of the Harz National Park. The city is flanked on the north by the Greater Hannover Area, which includes the state district of Nordwestmecklenburg and the city districts of Wolfsburg, Hanover, Hildesheim, Hildburghausen, and Saverna. To the east and southeast lie districts of Braunschweig, Göttingen, Bad Bentheim, and Bünde. To the south and southwest are the districts of Bremervörde and Wolfsburg. The city of Bückeberg is part of the municipality's southeastern border. Neighbouring municipalities Hannover's borders and
