Studies in recent years have demonstrated the importance of the mitogen-activated protein kinases (MAPKs) extracellular signal-regulated kinases (ERKs) 1 and 2 in the modulation of cellular differentiation and in the induction of genes encoding regulatory proteins in a number of non-neuronal cell types. ERK1 and 2 have been shown to act as common effectors of signaling by multiple receptor tyrosine kinases and G-protein coupled receptors. However, ERK5, a recently identified MAPK, has been linked to the regulation of nuclear transcription factor activity, differentiation, and oncogenic transformation, suggesting that it may play a novel role in the regulation of cell growth and differentiation and in the control of tumorigenesis. We have now shown that ERK5 is activated in a variety of cell types by insulin and we have mapped ERK5 to a 5 kb region on chromosome 10. This region contains at least eight potential transcription factor binding sites, including the CCAAT/enhancer binding proteins (C/EBPs), with homology to a C/EBP-binding domain. ERK5 is closely associated with the C/EBPs in vivo, is co-purified with the C/EBPs in vivo, and is inhibited by the C/EBPdelta inhibitor K28. The activation of ERK5 is accompanied by an increase in C 6d1f23a050
