Old Muramatsu Flutes Serial Number LINK

January 19, 2556 BC. Since Muramatsu doesn't engrave the model, it's best to contact Muramatsu. Send them the serial number and they will tell you. Hey, where can I get a serial number? - It's winter now. They should have everything in stock. - Can you tell me where to look? In that case, you'd better not mess with Muramatsu. He doesn't deal with serial numbers. He doesn't understand this. He just doesn't feel like doing it. If you find a use for them, I'll tell him. Can you help me? I have to find out first. If you send me the serial number, I'll see what I can do for you.

Yamaha Piccolo Flute on eBay I Have Seen Him. Sniff around, and you'll find that Haynes, Muramatsu, and. You will not find a definitive answer to this question, but.

FriendÂ . Ask HN: Can someone do a technical interview for me? - guybrush01 I am terrible at written tests in the recruitment process (though I'm generally good at problems that they throw at me)... but I do really well in person with a more informal environment. I'd be interested to see how people who are good at these things interview. I feel like I could learn a lot. ===== mattdeboard No. No. No. Yes, you will learn a lot if you throw your entire life into programming. No, you will not learn a thing if someone (randomly) compiles code for you. No, you will not learn a thing if someone (randomly) gives you a problem. No, you will not learn a thing from someone explaining the language in a language. No, you will not learn a thing from someone interviewing you. Yes, you will learn a few things if someone helpfully asks you to solve problems on a whiteboard with pen and paper (no, not to be expected from a technical interview). No, you will not learn a thing if someone chooses who they will hire and what they will say. No, you will not learn a thing if someone reviews your resume. No, you will not learn a thing if someone asks you to code a big ol' algorithm. ~~~ guybrush01 Right... which is why I asked about certain situations in the interview, not as a blanket statement. ----- jeffmould As someone who has interviewed and trained hundreds of candidates I don't see a problem with this at all. I understand not everyone has the ability to solve tough coding problems, but to expect someone to code a solution on a white board in front of you when you have just spent an hour with them is ridiculous. I have long since told candidates to go home and come back a few hours later to show me their solution. It usually can't be done on the first attempt and my rule is that they will not get hired based on the first try. I agree with mjbrown in that, if the candidate provides a resume
